1. STAFF MESSAGE

HOW DO I TEACH MY CHILD GOOD MANNERS ?

The basis of good manners is respect – respect for yourself and for others.
How do you teach that to your child?

The golden rule is to set the example yourself. It is not only about what you, as parent, does but also about how you talk to your child and to other people. The ability to treat others with respect, develops from birth to approximately the age of six years. Teach him/her, while they are still babies, to greet others by waving “hello” and “goodbye”. As soon as your child can talk, he/she can use words such as “please” and “thank you”.

Let your child greet people known to him/her, in a friendly manner. Show your child to pick up his/her toys, and to put his/her dirty washing in the laundry.

Later you can also teach your child to “write” thank you notes, when he/she receives a gift.

Manners are acquired while you, as a family, play and socialize – in front of, and between other people. Be an example and instil good behaviour.
